

The University of Texas Health Science Center/San Antonio, a comprehensive academic health university and research center in South Texas, seeks a Chief Revenue Officer, for the School of Medicine.

The University of Texas Health Science Center/San Antonio School of Medicine has over 800 faculty in 23 clinical departments. In addition to the Health Science Center's 250,000 square foot ambulatory care facility and Cancer Therapy and Research Center, clinical care is delivered at University Health System, CHRISTUS Santa Rosa Healthcare, and the South Texas Veterans Healthcare System. With 1,654 faculty and 5,985 employees, the University of Texas Health Science Center/San Antonio is in the top 2 percent of all research universities in the nation receiving federal funding and is the largest research intensive university in South Texas.

The Chief Revenue Officer is responsible for the management and direction of the revenue cycle operation across the School of Medicine. Reporting directly to the Vice Dean for Clinical Affairs with a dotted line reporting relationship to the Senior Associate Dean for Finance, the Chief Revenue Officer will ensure that best practices are utilized throughout the revenue cycle operation and identify new opportunities for continued enhancement. The Chief Revenue Officer is expected to work closely with the School of Medicine's affiliate hospitals to ensure that the revenue cycle is functioning effectively and efficiently at all sites of clinical service.

The successful candidate will have at least eight years of financial management experience gained within an academic medical center, faculty practice plan, or healthcare system. The successful candidate will have an advanced understanding of all revenue cycle functions and interrelationships and of budget, cost, and productivity management. An undergraduate degree is required; a master's degree is preferred. Candidates must have strong interpersonal and communication skills as well as a demonstrated customer service orientation.
